

Carl Berke

Carl, Berke Search's namesake and founder, is a healthcare and life sciences executive search professional who launched Berke to strategically address the challenges industry leaders often encounter during their searches for best-fit executive talent. Before starting the company, Carl had spent nearly his entire career amassing professional search and recruitment experience, conducting searches at the executive, board, and senior commercial levels and for a wide variety of scientific and technical leadership positions. The trusted, longstanding relationships Carl has with both organizations candidates afford him unfettered insight into the needs, challenges, and concerns senior staff often face during an executive search.

Because Carl has dedicated the better part of his career to this industry, he's extraordinarily mission-focused. He appreciates and has a deep respect for the integral role healthcare and life sciences industries play in improving and saving people's lives. This knowledge provides Carl and his team with the fuel and the focus to successfully complete every executive search with speed and precision. Carl's wide network of industry contacts know him as a trusted, seasoned business leader who can be counted on to participate in dozens of industry conferences each year. He's respected for his enormous dedication and indefatigable energy. Carl relies on a meticulous, carefully designed approach to executive search that he's continuously refined over the years.

Ultimately, Carl's years of industry experience and hundreds of successful searches have established Berke Search as a deeply trusted, highly sought-after executive search firm.